

Skills

Young people starting out in the world of work and further education need to be able to adapt to an ever-changing economic environment. The phrase 'A job for life' has definitely become a bit outdated. Having a wide range of skills that can be applied to various roles and sectors is something that all young people should be aware of.

The following are the skills most requested by employers:

communication

teamwork

problem-solving

Parents and carers have an important role to play in supporting their children to make informed decisions that optimise their chances of employment. By understanding the importance of skills, the ways in which they can present themselves and how they can be practised and perfected, parents have an even stronger way of supporting their child with their FutureGoals.

Activity:

Spot the Skill

To understand the wealth of skills needed for future aspirations and how often they are required within employment, take a look at our interactive Skill Search activity.

Simply read through the scenario for each job and try to figure out which skill is the most important in order to carry out that role effectively. We're using the STAR (situation, task, action, result) method to break down each key skill further so you can see the type of role carried out, alongside the relevant skill.

Let's go

Great work!

Whether thinking about yourself or your child, understanding the skills that you have and ways in which you can present them is a really useful piece of knowledge to have. We're frequently asked to give examples of times when our skills were put to action; personal statements, CVs and job applications/interviews to name just a few.

Take another look at the STAR method as a way to understand and establish examples of key skills. We've included a template (following page) that you could complete on your own, as an example for your child, or together, focusing on their skills.

Conversation starters

It can be hard for a young person to identify their own skills without the right kind of conversation; take a look at our conversation starters for a bit of inspiration:

- What do you think your life will look like 10 years from now?
- What is your favourite subject in school and why?
- What is something that you like to do when you're bored?
- Do you have any role models? Who are they, and why do you look up to them?
- What do you think you are good at?
- What jobs might you be interested in doing?
- What is something that you really like about yourself?
- What helps you feel better when you're upset or stressed out?
- What's the best thing about being a teenager?
- When you're older, what kind of lifestyle would you like to have?
- How would describe your perfect day? What would you do with it and why?
- What do you enjoy doing?
- Do you have any specific goals (do you already know what career you would like)?

Next steps

Now is a really good time for you and your child to sit down and evaluate their key skills. It's more than likely they will already exhibit many of the skills focused on in this activity. To help you understand the skills they have and come up with real-life examples of them in action, head to our Remote activity.

Here you'll find an interactive activity designed to rank personal key skills, a format to help you find evidence and ideas to help practise the skills that they are not so confident with.

Challenge 2: Create it!

JOINING THE DOTS

A BIT OF INSPIRATION
To begin, take a look at our Inspiration film.

It can be hard to work out what you want your future career to be. This challenge will help you discover how your interests, values and skills can help you achieve your goals.

You will need to identify, reflect and develop your personal skills, while spending time researching a range of career sectors.

By the end of this challenge you will have a better understanding of your future ambitions and a plan to help you achieve them.

It's time to evaluate your own skillset.

Each skill has a score of 1-8, simply place a 'dot' on the skills line where you see yourself. If you have a printed copy, you can join up the points on your map.

You will now be able to see which skills you are the strongest in and which skills require more attention.

If you are stuck, try out this quiz: icould.com/baze-quiz
